Sir Liam Donaldson,
The Chief Medical Officer,
Department of Health and NHS,
Richmond House,
79 Whitehall, London, SW1A 2NS.

Dear Sir Liam Donaldson,

With regards to the BBC News Item.
Patients 'at hospital error risk'.
"More than 500,000 errors are made in the treatment and care of NHS patients each year"
"estimated 840 of the mistakes has contributed to deaths"

Also your statement, "We must ensure when patients are harmed, sources of risks are identified, solutions are implemented and lessons are learned"

Sir Liam, copies of signed official medical documentation and letters I hold prove the following.
Such "sources of risks" "identified" can and are concealed.

Therefore no "solutions" can be "implemented" or "lessons" "learned".
As such a continuation of the "risks".
That persons holding positions of authority purporting to protect the public can act in such a way I find reprehensible.

Many such individuals who believe in a senseless misguided loyalty belief that by concealing wrongdoing in the NHS they are helping it, could not be further from reality.
Hiding mistakes means they can be repeated again and again.
Part of our health service failurers today.

Anointing hospitals with the titles "Trusts" (independent) is naive this is a word that must be earned, not given.
The words often used today related to hospital failurers is, "out of control", correctly in some cases I maintain.

Until an honourable person of authoritative stature arises to take control of such government departments, nothing will change.
Countless £ millions of public money will continue to be poured into the bottomless craw of NHS administration many incompetent, expensive brueaucratic bodies until that time occurs

Our dedicated medical profession working long hours short of staff and essential equipment, equal to any in the world will continue to suffer with the public against these impossible odds.

Sir Liam Donaldson, when Chief Constables holding copies of signed official medical documentation proving that administration officers of a hospital, in an unlawful way, falsified notations to conceal that potent and controlled drugs had been given to a patient to conceal that their use on that person had been incorrect, both the above unlawful actions breached the 'Misuse of Drugs Act.

These Chief Constables refused to investigate such unlawful acts in a genuine manner again preferring to aid in the concealment of wrongdoing putting the lives of other NHS patients at risk.

There could be no greater proof that my letter content has substance, if the public cannot trust the police, who can they trust?.

Please advise me of any information you may require.

Yours sincerely
