Dear Mrs MacKenzie,

I understand that you telephoned the Prime Ministers office on 14 October requesting information regarding the police. Your request has now been passed to the Home Office.

I note that I wrote to you on 10 October concerning a letter that you had sent to this department. I regret that I am unable to help you in your request as the Home Office cannot seek to intervene or comment on your case. I know that your dealings with Hampshire Constabulary have not been particularly helpful, but I can only suggest that you or your legal advisor get in touch with the constabulary, as they are the most appropriate authority to answer your queries.

Yours sincerely
