

PORTSMOUTH The News

portsmouth.co.uk

NEWSPAPER OF THE YEAR

Friday, March 27, 2009

FINAL

42p

WIN a £400 family holiday

SELECTED DATES ONLY - SEE FULL DETAILS INSIDE THE GUIDE

'Help me son, they're killing me'

Hospital deaths inquest told of dad's chilling last words

FULL STORY PAGE 5

New look for theatre

A MULTI-MILLION pound makeover is to get under way at Portsmouth's oldest theatre. Familiar to generations of residents, The New Theatre Royal in Guildhall Walk has been promised a £700,000 slice of government cash towards improvements.

PAGE 21

Find your dream car

WE'VE GOT 100s TO CHOOSE FROM INSIDE

Hart ready to take risks

PAUL HART admits he is ready to take calculated risks to preserve Pompey's Premier League status and declared: I won't shy away from the tough decisions.

BACK PAGE

Sheds • Summer Houses • Heavy Duty Workshops • Offices

Ask about our 25mm shiplap cladding

Visit our newly refurbished showroom

100's of styles to choose from
Made to order - any size, any shape

- Free Assembly
- Estimates and Advice
- Base work undertaken

ELFORDS LTD

TEL/FAX: 023 9266 4811

Est. over 25 years

Unit 16 Limberline Spur • Hilsea • Portsmouth • www.elfords.co.uk • Showroom Times: Mon - Fri: 8am - 4pm, Sat: 10am - 2.00pm & Sun: Closed

INQUEST: Man told son staff were 'killing him' – three days later he was dead

Dad's cry for help days before death

by Clare Semke
Health reporter

AN ELDERLY patient who died at a hospital told his son that staff were 'killing him', an inquest heard.

Robert Wilson allegedly made the cry for help three days before his death at Gosport War Memorial Hospital.

Son Ian – pictured on the front page – told the inquest into the 74-year-old's death and those of nine other patients at the hospital those were his dad's last words to him.

"The night before I left I leant down to give my dad a cuddle and he spoke his very last words to me, and he said "help me son, they are killing me".

"I said "no they are not, dad, they are trying to do their very best for you", and left him there.

"When I went in the next day he was in a coma."

Alcoholic Mr Wilson was transferred to the Gosport War Memorial from Queen Alexandra Hospital in Cosham where he had been admitted 16 days earlier, having fallen and broken his arm.

He was reportedly coherent on admission on October 14, 1998 but was prescribed oral morphine – having only been treated with paracetamol, painkillers and five small doses of morphine prior to his transfer.

A day later he was given 50mg of morphine and his condition rapidly deteriorated, the Portsmouth Crown Court jury heard.

Mr Wilson later became unresponsive, short of breath and his arms and legs were swollen.

On October 16 he was given 30mg of morphine and 40mg of diamorphine through an automatic pump. He died two days later.

The eight-strong jury has already heard how expert Professor David Black could not exclude the possibility that Mr Wilson had died from a coma caused by the prescription of

DEATHS BETWEEN 1996 AND 1999

- The inquests are being held into the death of Arthur Cunningham, 79, from Gosport who died on September 26, 1998; Elsie Devine, 88, on November 21, 1999; Sheila Gregory, 91, of Gosport, on November 22, 1999 and Ruby Lake, 84, of Gosport, on August 21, 1998.
- The other deaths are of Elsie Lavender, 83, of Gosport, on March 6, 1996; Geoffrey Packman, 67, of Emsworth, on September 3, 1999; Leslie Pittock, 82, on January 24, 1996; Helena Service, 99, of Gosport, on June 5, 1997; Enid Spurgin, 92, of Gosport, on April 13, 1999, and Robert Wilson, of Sarisbury Green, on October 18, 1998.
- All 10 deaths occurred between 1996 and 1999.

Robert Wilson

morphine. Son Ian said he was not informed by staff why the syringe driver – which automatically pumps drugs into the system – was being used.

"I think it is because of the drugs that his condition changed," he said.

He also told the inquest that staff at the Bury Road hospital had refused to keep him informed of his father's condition because he was not the designated family member.

The inquest heard that Mr Wilson died of heart failure as well as renal and liver failure.

(Proceeding)
clare.semke@thenews.co.uk

Dr Jane Barton

Homes 'at risk' if sea levels rise by a metre

UP TO 9,000 Portsmouth homes could be at risk of storm flooding if sea levels rise by one metre, the Environment Agency has warned.

Currently around 4,000 homes would be at risk in the city from a freak storm surge of the kind which happens only once every two centuries.

But if sea levels were to rise by a full metre by the end of this century, up to 9,000 homes could be ravaged by such extreme weather – not taking into account any new houses built in the next 100 years.

Mark Tinnion, the agency's south-coast risk manager, said: "Around 4,000 properties are at risk if we saw the kind of flood that only happens once every 200 years – the chances of that happening are 0.5 per cent in any given year. That's our estimate of how we see the risk right now."

"But if the one-in-200-years flood came along in 100 years' time, because of the sea level rise, that same kind of flood would become more severe because there would be higher seas and could affect around 9,000 homes, we estimate."

The prediction comes the day after the Environment Agency's chairman sparked fresh fears over global warming by declaring that some parts of the UK are 'impossible' to protect from rising seas.

In January The News reported how more than 4,000 homes between Portchester Castle and Emsworth could be at risk of flooding, and that the local authority and Environment Agency were consulting on a strategy to defend the area.

That's got it nailed!

FIREFIGHTERS had to remove a nail after a man put one through his thumb.

The man, in his 30s, visited St Mary's Hospital, Portsmouth, at about 9.30am yesterday with the nail stuck through his thumbnail either side.

But medics had to call out firefighters from Southsea to remove the head of the nail with a bolt cropper.

Dave Harris, from Southsea fire station, said: "The nail was right through the top of his thumb, from the nail to the pad."

"By the time we got there the nurse had given him a local anaesthetic so it was not too painful for him."

"We had to take the top part of the nail off with the bolt cropper."

COSHAM

DENTAL SURGERY

OPEN SIX DAYS A WEEK

We treat all kinds of dental emergencies
New patients are welcome.

WE HAVE A FULL RANGE OF DENTAL TREATMENTS AND SERVICES AVAILABLE

our opening hours are...

Monday 9am - 5pm
Tuesday 8am - 5pm
Wednesday 8am - 5pm
Thursday 8am - 5pm
Friday 9am - 2pm
Saturday 9am - 1pm

Telephone 02392 370543
for an appointment today .

COSHAM DENTAL SURGERY

Easy free parking

(close to the Cosham railway crossing gates)
5 PORTSMOUTH ROAD COSHAM
PORTSMOUTH PO6 2SG
email us at coshamdentalsurgery@googlemail.com

SEE US ON LOCAL PAGES TODAY

Managers 'ignored concerns' over plans to increase patient numbers

THE doctor responsible for looking after elderly people at the Gosport War Memorial Hospital quit her role in a row over patient care, the inquest heard.

Dr Jane Barton resigned as clinical assistant in July 2000 after 12 years in the post.

Taking the stand for the first time, she said NHS managers wanted staff in Dryad and Daedalus wards to take on more complex patients to ease bed-blocking at acute hospitals including Queen Alexandra, Cosham.

A senior manager wrote in a letter to Dr Barton and other staff that some surgeries had to be cancelled due to overwhelming demand.

Dr Barton raised concerns about the added pressure this would place on already stretched staff but, she claims, her fears were ignored. She said it would "inevitably lead to further serious and damaging complaints about the service given in my wards".

Dr Barton added that the hospital was struggling to cope with 40 per cent of continuing care patients in Portsmouth and south-east Hampshire.

The inquest into the deaths of 10 patients in the now defunct Dryad and Daedalus wards between 1996 and 1999 heard how Dr Barton was a full-time GP as well as clinical assistant at the hospital.

She was regularly expected to see and review up to 40 patients between 7.30am and 8.45am five days a week at that time.

She then fulfilled her general practice duties but would often return to the hospital at lunch times, evenings and weekends, the jury heard. She also took calls at home.

By 1998 the wards were operating at about 80 per cent capacity but managers wanted to increase this to 90 per cent.

For more on the inquest see portsmouth.co.uk