FAM000697-0001

Deleting website proves a hit with 500,000 views

TWO students have created a one-stop website to make it easier to remove yourself from websites on the internet.

University of Portsmouth web technologies students Robb Lewis and Ed Poole designed the website justdelete.me after they found it difficult to remove an account with the web phone service Skype.

Their new service allows people to delete unwanted accounts without having to navigate through menus and

And within a week of being launched it had already been visited by more than 500,000 people from more than 150 countries.

Robb said: 'We saw a few tweets about how difficult it can be to delete your Skype account and then heard that

FORMER teenage players at a football club will face a team

from a radio station to raise the match between former players of Athletico Porto and Express FM in memory of friends and family they have lost to the disease over the

It will be at Westleigh

October 13.

Park, the home of Havant and Waterlooville Football Club, on awareness of prostate cancer.

Nathan Jeffery is organising

Match for loved ones

Netflix won't delete your details at all. We decided to build justdelete.me as a one-stop shop for people like me who get annoyed with the hoops you have to jump through to delete certain internet accounts.

'I think in the wake of the NSA and GCHQ scandals, people are far more aware of what data they are sharing, and leaving, on web services.

'By deleting old or unused accounts users can stop spam emails, reduce the number of apps that have access to data and generally feel safe in the knowledge that they know what is online about them.'

The site gives a directory of URL links to delete your account from over 200 different web services, marking them either easy, medium, hard or impossible.

Mr Jeffery said: 'There will be balloon modelling, face-

painting, a half-time crossbar challenge and throughout the

'We will also be holding a big balloon release after the game for everyone wanting to be involved who would like to

Gates open at 12.30pm and remember loved ones or pay kick-off will be at 2pm.

Entry is £2.

respects.'

day raffle tickets will be on sale for some great prizes.

Three options are given to look in to hospital deaths

Families met with MP Norman Lamb to discuss report

by PRIYA MISTRY

priya.mistry@thenews.co.uk

THE families of patients who died at a Gosport hospital have three inquiry options to get the answers they want. Yesterday, families met health minister Norman Lamb to discuss the findings of the Baker report and how to move forward.

The report looked into deaths at the Gosport War Memorial Hospital in the 90s. As reported, Iain Wilson, 53, of Beryton Road, Gosport, was one of the people who visited Mr Lamb.

Mr Wilson's father Robert, 74, had been to Queen Alexandra Hospital, in Cosham, for a shoulder injury. He was transferred to GWMH, to wait to be put into a nursing home. But he died in October 1998, and the cause of death was put down to bronchopneumo-

Mr Wilson said: 'It was a good meeting, but nothing was decided

'It was left wide open to see what will happen next.'

Yesterday, families were told they could ask for a full public inquiry, a full independent investigation, or an independent panel, similar to the Hillsborough investiga-

'I have always said there should be a full-on public inquiry and a criminal investigation,' added Mr Wilson.

'A full inquiry would be very long-winded and expensive, so I don't know which way it will go.'

The Baker report looked into 81 deaths during the 90s, after concerns were raised about patient care under Dr Jane Barton. It revealed an over-prescription, and in some cases over-use, of opiates, and that note-taking had been poor.

Richard Baker, a profes-

INQUIRY PLAN Gosport War Memorial Hospital. Inset, lain Wilson

sor of clinical governance, who worked on the Harold Shipman inquiry, started his review in 2002.

The government would not publish the report until the final inquest into deaths from that period took place earlier this month.

MP Gosport Caroline Dinenage said: 'I would prefer option two or three, rather than a full inquiry.

'It would be expensive and distressing for families.

COMMENT PAGE 24

MEET THE REPORTERS

CITY REPORTERS

MILES O'LEARY (023) 92622169 miles.oleary@

thenews.co.uk

@MJ0_1

FAREHAM

CHRIS BROOM Fareham chief reporter (01329) 243003 chris.broom@thenews.co.uk

KIMBERLEY BARBER kimberley.barber@thenews.

HAVANT & WATERLOOVILLE

ELISE BREWERTON (023) 92492444 elise.brewerton@

thenews.co.uk

@elise_brewerton

JEFF TRAVIS (023) 92492444 jeff.travis@ thenews.co.uk @pn_jeff_travis

BEN FISHWICK

GOSPORT

ben.fishwick@thenews.co.uk (023) 92545804 @pn benfishwick

SPECIALISTS

EMMA JUDD

Business editor (023) 92622132 emma.judd@thenews.co.uk @pn_Emma_Judd

RUTH SCAMMELL Education reporter (023) 9262 2131 ruth.scammell@thenews.co.uk

@pompeyruth

SAM BANNISTER Defence correspondent (023) 9262 2137 sam.bannister@thenews.co.uk @pn_sambannister

PRIYA MISTRY Health reporter (023) 92622130

priya.mistry@thenews.co.uk @priya_mistry