An investigation into the deaths of 90 elderly patients at a hospital could result in medical staff facing prosecution over 10 of them, police said yesterday.

Files have been sent to the Crown Prosecution Service to decide if there is enough evidence to charge staff after allegations by families that sedatives were over-prescribed at the Gosport War Memorial Hospital in Hampshire, leading to the deaths of relatives receiving recuperative care between the late 1990s and 2002.
