

Associated offices throughout Europe

WANSBROUGH'S
WILLEY HARGRAVE
SOLICITORS

St Swithun's House
1a St Cross Road
Winchester SO23 9WP
Telephone 01962 841 444
Fax 01962 843 133
DX 2540 Winchester 1
LIX BSL 003

PRIVATE AND CONFIDENTIAL

Isobel Evans
Hospital Manager
Gosport War Memorial Hospital
Bury Road
GOSPORT
PO12 3PW

Date:
26 March 1996

Our Ref:
GOS212/AMB001
T Wright

Your Ref:

Dear Isobel

Ivy Smith (deceased)

Following this Inquest I presume you saw the article in The News and the accompanying leader. I attach copies in case you missed them but these seem to be extremely helpful and supportive.

The Coroner did in fact telephone me to see whether I had seen them!

Yours sincerely

Code A

T WRIGHT

Enclosure

ST/0326TW1.ST

Robert A Heslett
Kenneth C R Gibson
M Roger Parr
John C Blackwell
Robert L Beale
Paul N C Rowe
Christopher M Blythe
David J Rich
Nigel M Day
Paul W L Redfern
Valerie J West
Samuel G Hotchin
J Alison MacLennan

Nicholas C P Cockcroft
Geoffrey P Daunt
Paul C Murray
H L Michael Bothamley
Trevor K Chamberlain
John R Newman
Anthony Brown †
Stephen J Metcalfe
W D Andrew Roach
Diane Hallatt
Roohi Sheikh Collins
A Gordon R Walker
James Shepherd

John R Vasey
Julia M C Monteith
Andrew L Braithwaite
Peter Lee †
Christopher Horsefield
Neil J Forsyth
Dawn V Mullins
Timothy L Wright
Michael Doyle
Ann Goraj
Peter Rees
Tom G Corrigan
Glenn S Miller

Helen C Staines
F Michael Willis
Paul Townsend
Andrew C M Marsh
Sara E May
Paul F Parke
Mark J Speed
Julie Jackson
Andrew M Stokes
Andrew K Smith
Jeremy J Roper

Associates
Victoria Daniell
Jane M Weston
Mark Woodward
Helen R Gent
David C R Lodge
Nicole K Myerson
Neil K Braithwaite
Philip Hands
Amanda C Trembath
Sally E Yuill
Nicole Little
Andrew Scott

Philip D Steel
Andrew D Reid
Anne Batanero
S Rachel Bolt
Duncan M Greenwood
Arline Lester
Simon L R Pickett
Duncan S Rutter
Jill C Wigginton
John Dyball
D. Alun Griffith
Michael Jennings **
Martin J Cannon

Marcus Campbell
Simon J H Barry
Phillippa C Bell
Kiran K Bhogal
Phillip Brooks
John Hardman
Jane Hayden-Smith
Phillipa M C Kirkpatrick
Steven R Langton
Lisa Laurenti
Andrew M Pliener †

† Notary Public
* Barrister
 Not a Solicitor
Consultant
Anne Bevan *
Chief Executive
Christopher A Charles FCA

request told medication was given to wrong patient

DAP DIES AFTER DRUGS MIX-UP

too late.

Honesty replaces need for scapegoat

After a tragic error the important thing is to learn lessons from it.

Perhaps the reaction would be different if the woman who died had been significantly younger than 91, but the administration of a drug to the wrong patient at a Gosport hospital has to go down as no more and no less than a tragic human error.

A non-medically trained support worker, told to 'give this to Ivy,' gave a morphine-based drug to the wrong Ivy - a mistake that 'almost certainly' speeded up her death from bronchial pneumonia four days later.

Yesterday the Portsmouth coroner recorded a verdict of accidental death, commenting on the honesty shown by all concerned. No-one needed telling of the seriousness of the error, yet no-one tried to cover it up.

We are confident that hospital staff, even under extreme pressure, generally act with care and propriety in patients' best interests. That is why 'serious disciplinary action' was rightly considered unnecessary in this case.

The important thing is not to look back and find scapegoats but to look forward and ensure procedural lessons are learned. And we are assured they have been.

By JAMES TAYLOR

The News

A 91-year-old Gosport woman died four days after she was given the wrong drugs in a hospital mix-up.

An inquest heard how a staff assistant asked to 'give this to Ivy' administered the morphine-based drug to the wrong patient of two with the same forename.

The mistake was not realised until four hours later, by which time Ivy Smith had lapsed into a coma at the War Memorial Hospital in Gosport.

The Portsmouth inquest was told yesterday that Mrs Smith was rushed to the nearby RN Hospital Haslar to be given an antidote.

She appeared to be recovering but died on January 17 from bronchial pneumonia.

Pathologist Dr Norman Carr said it was impossible to tell whether there was a direct link because Mrs Smith was already very ill. But he believed the drugs had almost certainly speeded up Mrs Smith's death.

Mrs Smith was admitted to the War Memorial Hospital in December last year after she suffered a stroke. Until then she had been living at Chester Court, Jamalca Place.

Staff nurse Maureen Jarman told the inquest she was preparing late night medication for ward patients on January 13.

She handed the morphine drug to staff support worker Philippa Jones, who was not medically trained, and told her: 'Give this to Ivy'.

Mrs Jones wrongly thought she meant Ivy Smith. She only realised her mistake four hours later when she was checking on patients and found Mrs Smith unconscious.

Recording a verdict of accidental death, Portsmouth coroner James Kenroy said: 'One thing that does shine through in this unfortunate incident is the honesty of those involved.'

After the inquest Tony Horne, director of operations for the Portsmouth Health Care NHS Trust, said procedures for dispensing drugs had been changed.

'Throughout the whole process the staff involved have been very open about what happened,' he said.

'They are very aware of the consequences of what happened and we have not seen it fit to carry out serious dis-

Wednesday
March 20
1996

27p

request told medication was given to wrong patient

DAP DIES AFTER DRUGS MIX-UP

too late.

Honesty replaces need for scapegoat

After a tragic error the important thing is to learn lessons from it.

Perhaps the reaction would be different if the woman who died had been significantly younger than 91, but the administration of a drug to the wrong patient at a Gosport hospital has to go down as no more and no less than a tragic human error.

A non-medically trained support worker, told to 'give this to Ivy,' gave a morphine-based drug to the wrong Ivy - a mistake that 'almost certainly' speeded up her death from bronchial pneumonia four days later.

Yesterday the Portsmouth coroner recorded a verdict of accidental death, commenting on the honesty shown by all concerned. No-one needed telling of the seriousness of the error, yet no-one tried to cover it up.

We are confident that hospital staff, even under extreme pressure, generally act with care and propriety in patients' best interests. That is why 'serious disciplinary action' was rightly considered unnecessary in this case.

The important thing is not to look back and find scapegoats but to look forward and ensure procedural lessons are learned. And we are assured they have been.

By JAMES TAYLOR

The News

A 91-year-old Gosport woman died four days after she was given the wrong drugs in a hospital mix-up.

An inquest heard how a staff assistant asked to 'give this to Ivy' administered the morphine-based drug to the wrong patient of two with the same forename.

The mistake was not realised until four hours later, by which time Ivy Smith had lapsed into a coma at the War Memorial Hospital in Gosport.

The Portsmouth inquest was told yesterday that Mrs Smith was rushed to the nearby RN Hospital Haslar to be given an antidote.

She appeared to be recovering but died on January 17 from bronchial pneumonia.

Pathologist Dr Norman Carr said it was impossible to tell whether there was a direct link because Mrs Smith was already very ill. But he believed the drugs had almost certainly speeded up Mrs Smith's death.

Mrs Smith was admitted to the War Memorial Hospital in December last year after she suffered a stroke. Until then she had been living at Chester Court, Jamaica Place.

Staff nurse Maureen Jarman told the inquest she was preparing late night medication for ward patients on January 13.

She handed the morphine drug to staff support worker Philippa Jones, who was not medically trained, and told her: 'Give this to Ivy'.

Mrs Jones wrongly thought she meant Ivy Smith. She only realised her mistake four hours later when she was checking on patients and found Mrs Smith unconscious.

Recording a verdict of accidental death, Portsmouth coroner James Kenroy said: 'One thing that does shine through in this unfortunate incident is the honesty of those involved.'

After the inquest Tony Horne, director of operations for the Portsmouth Health Care NHS Trust, said procedures for dispensing drugs had been changed.

'Throughout the whole process the staff involved have been very open about what happened,' he said.

'They are very aware of the consequences of what happened and we have not seen it fit to carry out serious dis-

Wednesday
March 20
1996

27p