Dear Mr. Cayton

Dr. Jane Barton – GMC Reg. No. Code A

I thought I would let the dust settle a little before writing to you concerning the decision of the CHRE Panel on the outcome of the GMC hearing. I imagine you have received some rather angry letters but I hope you will not put mine in the same category.

I am of the opinion that like the NMC you have not been put fully in the picture and whilst I do not share your opinion that sanctions are enough to safeguard the public, retain confidence in the medical profession or trust in the system of regulation, I very strongly disagree that the GMC panel's decision was not so unreasonable that it could be appealed. However this decision was made without the knowledge of the actions taken in the past by the GMC and the Hampshire Constabulary. I refused to give evidence at the hearing as my case has still to be heard at an inquest and /or the criminal Court.(Jack Straw granted permission for an inquest 28 January 2009)

At the present time the sanctions protect the public and I therefore feel it would be a waste of public money to apply to the High Court. I am still of the opinion that this is a case for the criminal Court and this was my opinion when I approached the police 2 October 1998, based at that time on gross negligence manslaughter (Adomako) However I would now maintain when "personal policy" engulfs more non palliative patients it shows "intent". My complaints against the police on two occasions have been upheld for investigation failures. If however my case once more fails to be included in a criminal case I will continue to bring to light the action of the GMC, NMC CHRE and very strongly the incompetence of the police (if not worse) in a Public Inquiry. No doubt you are aware that I had an appointment at the House of Commons last November and an early day motion has been put forward for the Public Inquiry.

I think it is now necessary to bring to your attention for future reference the situation with the GMC. I enclose copies of recent correspondence.

I would appreciate a response to my letter not just an acknowledgement.

Yours sincerely
